Wil.mingron, N. C., May 20, 1878. Editors Dispatch: The lines subjoined were written by the Rev. Dr. Staughton, an eloquent and distinguished Baptist minister, who died in Washington city in 1829. He was for many years pastor in Philadelphis, and afterwards president (the first) of Columbian College. His remains were removed from Washington in 1832 and reinterred in the Sansom-Street Cemetery. For several years during his pastorate he delivered every spring lectures to a class of young people on botany and other subjects. It is stated that to assist the recollection of his pupils he was in the habit of putting illustrations in verse. The following proof of the roundness of the earth may be interesting to some of your readers just at this esting to some of your readers just at this time, and may contribute to the information of the rising generation. Respectfully yours. J. B. TAYLOR.

"We clearly demonstrate the earth to be round, Since such a form fittest for motion is found; The higher the eye is, the prospect's more vast, And a ship's hull is seen not so soon as her mast; Round the earth the bold mariner often has been. And the rest of the planets are circular seen.
This, too, in all lunar eclipses is shown.
That the shadow is round on the face of the moon: the polar star sinks as we sail to the line. And causis from a level must gently decline."

Editors Dispatch: Will you give the following verses a place in your paper, and if possible mention also the name of the author? By doing so you will greatly oblige E. T. G.

Engaged. Before I trust my fate to thee,
Or place my hand in thine,
Before I let the future give
Color and form to mineBefore I peril all for thee.
Question thy soul to-night for me.

I break all brighter bonds, nor feel One shadow of regret; Is there one link within the past That holds thy spirit yet? Or is thy faith as pure and free As that which now I pledge to thee? Look deeper still. If thou canst feel

Within thy inmost soul
That thou hast kept a portion back,
Wile I have staked the whole,
Let no false pity spare the blow,
But in true mercy tell me so.

Is there within thy heart a need That mine cannot falfil? One cord that any other hand Could better make or still? Speak on, lest at some future day My whole life wither and decay. RICHMOND, May 20, 1878. [For the Dispatch.]

are at once telegraphed over the continent as Communists. Indeed, the name begins to play the same part in our current controversies that the name "Familist" did in the theological controversies of the Puritan period. Whenever you did not OLD DOMINION STEAMSHIP like a man, and did not exactly understand what he would be at, you disposed of him by saying he was a Familist. So our hard-money people stigmatized all their opponents, including the National party, as Communists; and the Nation passed the name on to the Protectionists; and those who sympathize with capitalists affix it to trades-unions and workingmen's parties; and the National party in Indiana affix it to capitalists and banks. The consequence of this loose talk is not merely to breed confusion in the minds of those who indulge in it, but to tend to produce a panic, both needless and in the highest degree mischievous, in the mind of the public. Such panies are the necessary previous condition of those temporary submissions of the majority to the minority which in Europe are called revolutions. They should be impossible in this country, where every citizen is accustomed to insist that all social and political action shall flow in the ample channels provided by our laws.

Of course there are Communists in the United States, many of them. They are most numerous in those quarters in which great bodies of foreign-born workmen are suffering under hard times, and are refreshing their memories as to the wild theories sown broadcast over Europe in 1848. But the temporary unrest and dissatisfaction produced by hard times is not in any large measure communistic in its character; it has not become enmity to society and its institutions, and it would vanish in a month if wages were better and work plenty. Nor can there arise any danger to our country from Communism, or even from the more violent types of discontent which are not such. The uprising of the have-nots against a European Government is like the rush of a mob against the palings of a park, while a similar uprising here would be the rush of a mob against the Alleghenies-and it is not the Alleghenies that would be hurt .- Penn Monthly.

In the good old times when Ireland had a Parliament of her own, one honorable gentleman said pleasantly, in the course of debate, of another honorable gentleman : "The house of the honorable member are and have ever been political and personal hirelings, from the white-livered hound that is trembling on the flure to the painted hag that is grinning in the gallery." After the duel some one asked the speaker how he came to know that the sister of his adversary, the "hag" of the peroration, was to be present in the House. "Sure, I walked down with him, and he tould me himself," answered RACON. the orator.

"Got nothing to do?" snarled old Mr. Thistlewaite to a poor hungry tramp who applied for food. "Got no money? Can't get any work? Why don't you go West and rob a Union Pacific sleeping-car? No work!" And the old man snorted in wrath as he thought how foolish it was for a man to lie around these times and say he had nothing to do .- Hawkeye.

These are hard times, and the Connecticut cigar-makers excuse their custom of making the wrappers of their cigars of leather because it makes the cigar last longer, and is consequently a lighter burden on the pocket of the consumer. This is unselfish. Hawkeye.
